The Little Cafe in Copenhagen is just like one of my favourite Danish pastries; rich, sweet, often fruity, and with a lovely romantic ending, the icing on top.
I am looking forward to reading Sophie's story 'The Little Brooklyn Bakery, which is previewed at the end of this story'.

Just the right kind of decent food side, with a little courtyard and modern fusion kind of atmosphere to it. The café features designers like Martino Gamper and Arne Jacobsen to name a few, which is quite fascinating because the prevailing impression of the whole scene is that it looks like a mini modern home-depot kind of art museum café.
